Accessing NCCs information on myGov

Non-concessional contributions (NCCs) include personal contributions made to super from after-tax income or other available savings. Limits apply to the total NCCs that you can contribute to super without exceeding your contribution limits. To help avoid breaching the cap, you can access contribution information on myGov.

What are non-concessional contributions?

Non-concessional contributions (NCCs) include those made with after-tax money, such as your take home pay, or funds in your bank account. NCCs may provide significant opportunities to build super for retirement. NCCs form part of the tax-free component of your super interest and are not taxed when released from super.

NCCs commonly include:

- personal contributions for which a tax deduction is not claimed
- spouse contributions
- excess concessional contributions not released from super, and
- certain amounts transferred from a foreign super fund.

Am I eligible to make NCCs?

To be able to make NCCs, you need to meet certain eligibility rules. This includes:

- you're aged under 75 at the time you make the contribution<sup>1</sup>, and
- your 'total super balance'<sup>2</sup> at the previous 30 June is less than certain limits (see below table).

Limits on NCCs

Like other contribution types, there are limits on the total amount of NCCs you can contribute to super and penalties apply if limits are breached. For more information on excess contributions, see ato.gov.au.

In 2023/24 the annual NCC cap is $110,000 (and increasing to $120,000 in 2024/25). However, depending on your total super balance, you may be able to use the bring forward rule to make even larger contributions sooner. This rule may enable you to bring forward up to two years' worth of NCCs.

What's my limit?

Your eligibility to contribute up to the annual NCC cap or larger amounts under the bring forward rule, is determined based on your total super balance. The limits for the current financial year are summarised in the table below. You can also check your total super balance details using myGov.

- 1. Contributions must be received by your fund no later than 28 days after the month you turn 75.
- Total super balance includes the total of all amounts you hold in super accumulation and pension accounts, in-transit rollovers, and if you have a self managed super fund, it may also include the outstanding balance of a limited recourse borrowing arrangement. The total is reduced by personal injury or structured settlement contributions made to super.

How to access non-concessional contribution details on myGov

There are a few ways you can monitor your NCCs and to check whether you're currently in a bring forward period, including myGov, contacting funds and keeping statements and records.

On the following pages, the steps to using myGov to access NCC information are explained. However, it is recommended that detailed records also be maintained and referred to. This is because there may be a delay before your super fund reports details about your contributions to the ATO. Remember, additional tax applies for excess contributions.

Note: the below screenshots and scenarios relate to different fictional individuals and are used to show you the possible NCC and bring forward data on myGov.

Next steps

Contribution rules and eligibility criteria for NCCs and the bring forward provisions are complex. This guide is not designed to provide comprehensive information about how the rules work or how they may apply to you. It is important that you speak with your financial adviser, your registered tax agent and visit ato.gov.au for more information.
